6 Faith Consistent Investing Seminar

Track 1: Faith Consistent Investment (FCI)- Highlights of Catholic faith tradition in relation to FCI

3iG has set itself an historic task of shifting the attitudes and investment policies of the major world religions from the tradition of a via negativa – not investing in certain arenas because of strongly held views about, for example, alcohol, armaments or interest income – to a via positiva – selecting arenas to invest in because the activities thus supported are consistent with faith values and belief.

The question is: which types of investments should we look at? What is the added value of FCI and to which of the potential investments should we devote our priorities? Many corporations, foundations, organisations are involved in SRI, often motivated through risk issues, and utilitarian perspectives such as new business niches. FCI claims to be a wider concept than SRI. The Faiths share with large pension funds a long-term perspective on investments unlike the short-term profit orientation of the general market. FCI practitioners are informed by a world view and vision that is rooted in their religious faith perspective. According to the Islam we are temporarily visitors on this planet. According to Judaism God owns the earth and we are his custodians. For Sikhs mankind forms an integrated part of nature, a belief that is shared by Hindus as well as many Buddhist traditions. Christians adhere to the principle of stewardship of the planet. FCI practitioners are often motivated by the virtue of solidarity which finds expression in the struggles of specific communities and peoples in specific regions of the world. For many of our board members 3iG should focus on the Millennium Goals of the United Nations.

The Board of 3iG has invited five scholars, renowned in the realm of faith as well as investment, to highlight the various beliefs. These scholars present their views in an engaging workshop during the conference in Paris.

Erik van Praag, Director, The Edge b.v., Netherlands

Workshop: Presence based Leadership.

Questions:

- Why do we need Presence based Leadership?
- How do we get there?
- What are its results, financially and otherwise?

Background.

Where shall we be 50 years from now?

Shall we live in a wasteland, in which the few surviving people fight a life and death war with each other? Or in paradise on earth, one in which we learned to care for each other and the planet? Or shall we be somewhere in between?

The future is in our hands. What's needed is Leadership based on Presence, instead of based on Ego. A Leadership based on Awareness instead of based on skill. Based on not-knowing (intuition) instead of theory. Not focused on short term results, but on connection, sustainability and wholeness. Leadership not just by the few people in top positions, but leadership by everyone.

There is no contradiction between paradise on earth and a solid economical base. On the contrary, the latter is a prerequisite for the first. In this workshop we'll explore what Leadership based on Presence really means, how we get there and what are its results both financially and otherwise. We'll do this by comparing it with Ego based leadership, and by exploring the concepts of Presence and Ego in depth. It will become clear what role both the executive and the professional can play in fostering this type of leadership.
